

Covent-Garden Theatre, March 4, 1775.

NOTICE having been sent THIS MORNING, that Mr. BARRY was suddenly attacked with a severe Fit of the Gout, and his Arm so much swelled as to render it impossible for him to put on any Dress, Mr. HULL (whose Superintendence of the Rehearsals makes him acquainted with the Business of the Play) has undertaken, AT A FEW HOURS NOTICE, to get through Mr. BARRY's Character of Artabafus, in the best Manner he is able; and Mr. BOOTH, under the same difficult Circumstances, has made himself as well acquainted as possible in Mr. HULL's Character of Teramenes.

This sudden and unavoidable Exigence, will, it is hoped, plead for these Changes, and the INDULGENCE of the Audience is humbly requested to the TWO PERFORMERS who have endeavoured to repair the Deficiency.
